

Herauf - Axtman back from Maryland

RU-Fit Grant Director, Amy Axtman and RU-Fit Educational Coordinator, Rhonda Herauf, have returned from attending the 2011 OSDFS National Conference in National Harbor, MD in August. The National Conference is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Education Office of Safe and Drug-Free

Rhonda Herauf
Schools.

The theme for the conference was "Making the Connection: Creating and Maintaining Conditions for Learning". The conference focused on creative approaches to make learning environments safe and to engage and prepare students for the roles and challenges they will face in the future.

Amy Axtman

The goals of the 2011 National Conference were to highlight information from research and the field that will demonstrate programs and best practices to improve the conditions for learning, and assist State and local officials in assessing needs, establishing priorities, and selecting the most effective programs and strategies.

Examine new trends, innovative approaches, and comprehensive, integrated strategies that may offer new approaches to both old and emerging problems and challenges.

Enable participants to build upon skills and receive training from practitioners in the fields of emergency management; health, mental health, and physical education; alcohol, drug, and violence prevention;

Herauf was excited about her attendance stating, "I was looking forward to attending the conference to learn about different grants and programs that can further help our schools and communities." Both Herauf and Axtman were also very interested in attending the session on bullying, an issue that has recently gained state and national attention.
